A Seaside Episode

[From the Boston Courier.]

"In what proportion would you pay A poet for his time

t he should spend a night and day Upon a single rhyme?"

Thus the poet. Crisp and cool The editor replied: "In verse proportion is my rule," The poet gasped and died.

Hand in hand they walked along Beside the sunlit sea.

They heard the wavelet's summer song-

'Oh! how I love you, love," he said,

"How dear you are to me!"
The maiden drooped her pretty head,
But not a word said she.

Wilt thou be mine, my love?" said he

"My shoes are full of sand?"

While grasping her soft hand, 'Oh! don't make love just now," said she,
